UNIT-III

Techniques of Good Writing Skills

Factors which contribute to clear, fluent and effective writing are :-

1. Purpose :- the reason for writing
2. Audience :- the readers
3. Writers process :- getting ideas, getting started, writing drafts, revision
4. Mechanics :- handwriting, spellings, punctuations
5. Grammar :- rules of verb, agreement, articles
6. Syntax :- sentence structure, stylistic choice
7. Content :- relevance, clarity, originality, logic
8. Word Choice :- vocabulary, idioms, phrases, tone
9. Organisation :- paragraphs, topic and support sentences, cohesion, unity

* Writing is considered as a skill of communicating with audience through the medium of paper and the effectiveness depends primarily on clarity of expressions.

Process of Writing

1. Pre writing
2. Writing
3. Post Writing

These stages can be seen as rough breakpoints that are to be kept as guiding principles of writing. Writing process is actually a complicated process and it cannot be broken into three clear stages

1. Pre Writing

This is the most crucial stage in the writing process. It inv forming a thesis statement and an outline. At this poin writer has to make a clear idea of the purpose of writing

Some commonly used techniques during this stage are :-

→ Brain storming
→ Clustering and clubbing of ideas
→ Mind mapping
→ Branching and organising

04/02/2025 2. Points To be checked at this stage
Tuesday

→ Each of the heading describes one of the central idea.
→ We are able to add on further subpoints to each main heading and we have atleast one paragraph and each of main head
→ All the headings are free of overlaping of ideas.
→ All the headings are logically related to one another.

2. Writing

This stage is the actual stage of writing and elaborating and filling out the frame prepared in the pre-writing stage.

The important task at this stage is dividing the writing into :-

→ The Introduction
→ The Body
→ The conclusion

i) The Introduction

It is important to introduce the subject and set the direction of writing according to the imagination of the reader.

ii) The body

In the body of the writing the main objective is sequencing of the ideas, logicality and coherence of presentation.
In presenting the main points one can either proceed to general to specific or from the specific to the general. Commonly, people move from the general to specific, which is called as the funnel method of presentation.

iii) The Conclusion

The Conclusion is responsible for giving the reader a sense of completion or a feel of tying of the lose ends.

3. Post Writing

This is the last stage in the process of writing. It includes the task of re-reading the content to check what kind of revision might be required to be made. This step is much more than proof reading. This step requires 50% of the total writing time. The thinks to remember at this stage :-

→ be objective.
→ Keep the purpose of writing.
→ Keep in mind the audience and there expectation.

Paragraph Writing

A good paragraph is one that carries a single idea wh is logically organised and coherrently presented.

Paragraph Includes a topic sentence, which is the main sentence of paragraph which conveys the central theme paragraph.

Topic sentence is generally written in begining of the pa
-graph. However, it can be written in the middle or at the end of the Paragraph. Sometimes, a topic sentence co be hidden or implicit within a paragraph and not writ clearly. In such a situation the other sentence of a para should lend support and substantiate the topic senten
The skills in developing a paragraph is appropriate seq
-cing it is skill of organising a text material By dis the priority the focus of different point and linking of ideas and concepts using correct linkers.

Linkers to show the relationship they have. The link are thought connectives.

Examples - although, in addition to, further, moreover,
